What Others Are Saying...

"My mother was an assisted living resident at The Carrollton for the last two and a half months of her life.

The facility captures the very essence of New Orleans architecture, culture, and ambiance. For example, the tile in the dining area reflects the tile used in Café du Monde, and the support columns in the main hall are ornate iron posts like those supporting balconies in the Vieux Carré.

The rooms are contemporary with high ceilings and extra-large windows make the rooms feel even larger. The bathrooms are large and easily accessible for wheelchair-bound residents. There is ample wall space for plenty of family pictures and memorabilia.

Most important, the director leads by example. His mantra is that no employee should use the phrase: "That's not my job." I have even seen him pushing my mother's wheelchair and assisting other residents as an aide might do. He calls employees and residents by full name, interacting with each on a very personable level.

My brother and I, like others with aging parents, wanted the best care for our mother. The Carrollton has a facility-provided watch for residents and promised that when my mother pushed her call button, someone would come to her within three minutes, even using a computer-generated program that track the time for a staffer to reach a resident.

The Carrollton not only "talked the talk," but they "walked the walk" too. They delivered all they promised! I recommend The Carrollton for all who desire quality care for their loved elderly family member!"
